

WOULD YOU CHANGE IF YOU COULD?

"Would you change your "devness" if you could?

Has this desire been a positive or negative thing in your life?

Has it been frustrating or exciting?

For me- I wish I would have been more in tune with it earlier in my life and some of my choices would have been different, but I wouldn't change it. It is part of who I am... even if only a few know about it. "

"It's been with me always. I can't remember not being this way. If it was taken from me, I'm not sure who exactly I would be without it. It's a frightening thought, that I might be a "me" that I don't recognize."

"If there was one thing I'd change, it's that I wished I had the balls to admit it to myself from the beginning. Then I would've concentrated on dating wheelers. "

"Wouldn't change it for the world. I find different things attractive in different men, and that's something I respect about myself. I realize that it's not just "the chair" that makes the man, but the man himself."

"What I didn't like about my Dev thing was when I was thinking I was the only one having the thoughts I was having..I went through some confusion periods and a lot of questionings... But thanks to my ex who told me about Dev's it gave me a lot of light and then everything seemed a lot easier....

I just have 1 regret about a decision I took driven for my Devnes but oh well is like everything in life: decisions, decisions!!....I'm just glad that it didn't affected the guy it affected me, so at least I didn't hurt him...

To me definitely is been really exiting, I have a lot of really awesome and fulfilling experiences with wheelers that won't change for anything! "

"yup, I agree if I had known I wasn't 'the only one' a lot sooner. I fully expect I would have made some different choices and it would certainly have been a heck of a lot easier to cope with psychologically. But it's an integral part of who I am, so I can't imagine being any other way."

My opinion: I always knew that disability brought me pleasure. I tell myself that I may withdraw my lifetime probably cause a great void in me, and I should learn to know me. But basically the "others" get there, why not me. If I had to live without my side devotee, I think I would prefer never to have felt in me: be born "like the others." Today it's part of me, plus I know I'm not the only one in the world, and I can admit to a few people. Being a devotee is my freedom of expression, my pleasure in the street. I remove it would be like watching a movie in black and white: the same story, but more bland.

Source : <http://paradevo.proboards.com/index.cgi?board=devs&action=display&thread=1140>