

Winnie the Witch lived in a black house in the forest.
The house was black on the outside and black on the inside.
The carpets were black.
The chairs were black.
The bed was black and it had black sheets and black blankets.
Even the bath was black.

Now instead of a black house, she had a yellow house with a red roof and a red door.
The chairs were white with red and white cushions. The carpet was green with pink roses.

The bed was blue, with pink and white sheets and pink blankets.
The bath was a gleaming white.

And now, Winnie can see Wilbur no matter where he sits.

One day, after a nasty fall, Winnie decided something had to be done. She picked up her magic wand, waved it once and ABRACADABRA! Wilbur was a black cat no longer. He was bright green!

But when Wilbur closed his eyes and went to sleep, Winnie couldn't see him at all. So she sat on him.

... ABRACADABRA! Wilbur had a red head, a yellow body, a pink tail, blue whiskers, and four purple legs. But his eyes were still green.
Now, Winnie could see Wilbur when he sat on a chair, when he lay on the carpet, when he crawled into the grass.

This time, Winnie was furious. She picked up her magic wand, waved it five times and . . .

When Wilbur sat on a chair with his eyes open, Winnie could see him. She could see his eyes, anyway.

When Wilbur sat outside in the grass, Winnie couldn't see him, even when his eyes were wide open.

Next morning Wilbur was still up the tree. Winnie was worried. She loved Wilbur and hated him to be miserable.

Wilbur climbed to the top of the tallest tree to hide. He looked ridiculous and he knew it. Even the birds laughed at him.
