

Murder on Christmas

It was Christmas night. Mr Miller was a rich producer. He was having a party in his house to celebrate the success of his film murder on Christmas. He lived in Hollywood, in a big beautiful house.

It was 10 pm. Mr Miller was chatting with his guests. They were drinking champagne. Miss Smith was the actress who played the principal role in Murder on Christmas. Tonight, she was wearing a red dress. She didn't look happy. She was standing in front of the window. She was phoning someone, probably her boyfriend who was not at the party. She was crying.

Suddenly, Miss Smith put her phone in her bag, she took a glass and she hit her head with it violently. The glass broke. She fell on the floor. Some blood appeared. Mister Lee, a camera operator in Murder on Christmas saw the scene. He screamed, ran to the telephone and phoned the police.

Fifteen minutes later, Inspector Holmes arrived.

"Did you see anything?" he asked.

"I did!", Mister Lee answered, "It was so strange... She was on the phone, then she started crying and then she broke a glass on her own head."

"I see", Inspector Holmes said "What else?"

"Well, I think she committed suicide", Mr Lee said.

"Elementary, my dear Watson", Holmes said to his assistant...