

CYCLES

"I have always wondered if I was the only one to experience" dev cycles". As I considered devotee (ie d. All my life), I had these cycles. It's a seesaw between three stages continuously. So I developed a highly scientific glossary that helps me to detect what state of mind, I am now. The system also helps to determine what happens to me at one point.

CYCLES ARE:

1. MODERATE

It is still there, but easy going. You think about it at least once a day, but in a relaxed, even happy. I feel like: "I'm special, and I like it."

2. EXTREME

Almost unbearable desire and about the only thing you can think all day and night. Orgasm happens all the time, everywhere, by the mere thought of "what" issue. Work and other activities is difficult, because your mind is occupied with fantasies. First, it's nice and ecstatic, then it becomes a nightmare. I feel like: "How will I survive that!" and "Please let it stop ...".

3. NON-EXISTENT

Logically, you know you are a devotee, but in reality you are not interested (at all) for anything related to devotion. You can even find it boring. I feel like: "Hey, I want my dévotisme be back!" or "It's over ... It's over! "

The order of these steps may vary. Cycle length can vary from days to weeks to months. No. 2 is always the shortest (obviously too tiring), while the No. 1 or No. 3 can last for a while, see a very long time. "

"Yes, there is absolutely cycles. Some days it's overwhelming and it's the only thing I can think of. I mean I am going about my business, but I can not wait until the end of the day without thinking, meditating, reading or looking at pictures of guys in chairs. These days it's like a drug. I can not stop thinking about it.

I think it has something to do with the menstrual cycle. I notice just before and after my cycle and when I'm ovulating is the strongest. Not that the other day, I do not think about it, but these days it can be overwhelming.

Today is one of those days. I spent a good part of this morning reading and surfing sites about men in chair. I probably will not do more for another month or two. "

"I am totally and completely agree. Some cycles can last for months, weeks or days. I think sometimes the ordinary aspects of life come to take over and push those desires in the background. I'm pretty sure in my state "non-existent," if I find a hot guy in a wheelchair, I quickly pushed back into the state "extreme" dévotisme. I also agree that it has a lot to do with my hormonal cycle. "

"Yes, cycles exist for me, too. But for me, I think the cycles are self-imposed. If I'm true to myself, I know I have a horror of masturbation. Sex and armchair are the only stimuli that can direct me to the extreme stage: how can I survive this time.

When I try to deny my true self and try to live a "normal" life, I can not force my dévotisme to be absent for a while. "

"I agree, I noticed the same thing. It comes and goes, seemingly beyond thought. It seems to me to step 3 right now, which is perhaps why I have not been so present on the forum lately.

In my case, I feel that the cycles are moving very slowly, lasting one month at a time. During stage 2 is most intense, I feel that guys are unattainable disabled. Now that I do not feel that same way, I'm less obsessed.

However, the smallest things can trigger the cycle, like seeing a hot man in a wheelchair in public, or reading a good book or watching a good movie.

As to why I feel when I'm in phase "nonexistent," the cycle right now, I do not feel like I repressed anything. It's just that I'm really focused on non-sexual in my life (especially work), so this is just a kind of sleep. It's not a bad thing - it's nice to not be so obsessed. "

"I agree with you all. I also have "cycles". After 7 years of "coexistence" with my partner (it is valid), I was in the first phase of the cycle, it was a most important phases that I have ever had. After three or four months, I jumped in step 2 ... This is where I found Paradevo.

I never met a guy invalid ... So I never filled that need. Now that I am "married" (or something similar), I know I can never deceive my guy, but I discovered that being in contact with men in chair, exchange letters, and other, allows me to feel like" part" of Stage 2.

Now, if I know I'm in a "stage 2" ... for all my family problems ... I have no sexual desire (libido is my below 0) then ... this is a strange step for me! "

"I am now at stage 2, which is why I had the idea of participating in this matter. Until a week ago I was in Stage 3.

I think sometimes sex just does not play a real role in our lives. At these moments, I do not feel like my repressed dévotisme. Stage 3 is nice, and for me, I want especially in times when I am busy with something else, like work or friendships, etc. So, the stage 2 often comes during the holidays, when I have more time for me to relax, to dream.

My recent change of stage 3 to stage 2 came suddenly, like the night. I guess something always fires, but usually I do not remember what it was then. This may be a hot man in a wheelchair, a movie, or even just a rush of hormones. The theory of the monthly hormonal cycle is interesting. For me, sometimes it can be fair, but then, Step 3 may continue for several months, which would effectively refute the theory. Yet, what, who made it happen so suddenly? Or am I the only one to have? These changes do not they come on gradually?

There are many aspects about the stage 2. For example, when your guy is just sitting there and stares at you with those hungry eyes, because suddenly your mind is filled with an immense desire ... why? Because he is sitting there!

This is such a thirst that you suddenly feel the uncontrollable, and it can easily turn into obsession. I think the days when you're frantically spirit to browse Youtube for anything that might give you the kick, even watching video ten times, just because it's incredibly hot, that's stage 2.

(For those who know Dark Angel: Do not you feel a bit like Max, when she is in heat?)

But there's so much more to say about all this "

"I know exactly how you feel! He does not come gradually for me either, it's so sudden! The need for a party, at least, this "scene" is terrible! ... As you said, it's like to be hot! LOL When I go into phase 2, I want to read a lot of stuff Devotee (stories, books, novels) and I watch movies. (Youtube does not satisfy me ... for now)

What a strange type of person we are-the Devotees! I wonder if we have all the same desires? (I've never been "no devotee")

The first man that I never imagined my partner is disabled. With all the other guys before him I did, I used to let my imagination soar! ... you know what I mean. "

"I totally agree with your analysis of cycles and I can not begin to say how it's comforting to know that I am not alone in this area.

I think there is a link with my menstrual cycle. I tend to be really Devotee just before, but maybe just hormones. But how can I direct them? Because the length of cycles "non-devotee" seem to come and go at random, although I agree that anytime a "trigger" can put me off.

Oh the extremes of pleasure and pain are involved with Step 2. It is exhausting and at the same time we pass not such a relief. "

"For me as a devotee, there are two cycles. Inside and out. Or extreme and non-existent. I love how you described in step 2. It's exhausting! Intoxicating but it is completely drained. And impossible to maintain over a long period. One month I will be hung on a particular hobby. I will eat, drink, and sleep. Next month, I am above and move on. "

"Mine is never as extreme as some of you know. But I noticed specific cycles. Specifically my menstrual cycle. During ovulation my dévotisme is at its peak and I fantasize constantly, but not enough to have orgasms, and not to the point of feeling exhausted.

There was a time in my life where I "fed" my dévotisme looking at pictures on the Internet. It was bad, it made things worse. I stopped doing that for two reasons: I felt out of control, and I realized that image sites that exploited the people I looked for photos (which generally have no idea that their image was taken for these purposes). It's easier to live now that I do not do that.

ca can trigger by seeing a man in a wheelchair (not any). Then it will be unpleasant for a few days because it gives me new fantasies. I have a collection of moments indelible in my mind of man in a wheelchair who "just did it" for me. "

"I firmly identified these cycles. Number 3 is the most frustrating for me, because I still think the magic is gone. Lately, for some reason, it has taken longer than usual. I feel like Alex from "Clockwork Orange" after he was "cured". I do not want to be cured! I want to be a danger to society forever.

Although I agree that sometimes, step 2 can become overwhelming and full of reverie, I do not remember having a difficult time for me to concentrate and to function during this phase. On the contrary. I am more creative, productive and full of positive energy This is the period where I feel most comfortable with myself, and there is this wonderful experience of "I am special, I cherish a secret." I think it is like to be pregnant (not that I've never been. The last time I remember, it was triggered by a guy who joined a research group I used to work: he entered the room with a crutch, he limped heavily. Later, I discovered he was an amputee leg. It really was not my type, and there was nothing that could. He helped me move the furniture in the room, and I was delighted to make the effort to look so elegantly. It was good to know that I was not physically more capable than him, and yet I have suggested that their assistance was significant. And he was there, shivering in my back, a hot shower, a familiar "mild pain", and I knew that step 2 was back. "

"I can totally relate to my cycles. This is particularly the case when I go out with someone. I also find that I can spend months at no or moderate stage, but the jump in the most intense stage usually occurs with a trigger. Sometimes it comes from just seeing a man in a chair in a movie or sometimes it's a sexy dream. The thing is this: when I do not feel like that, what does that mean in a relationship with an invalid? I can be super-contained, and I do not really have much control over what I dream. Yet I can not help but feel guilty fantasies that I inadvertently about men in wheelchairs "

"I had a pleasant step of Phase 3 for a while coasting. It was nice. A kind of holiday myself, if you want. I even had the impression of being only attracted to men with disabilities.

Then I got a trigger, a nice big ... and" BAM!", I am immersed in stage 2. God thank you, not a very intense stage 2.

I really wish this phase 3 power coasted a little longer before being driven back in there! It's exhausting and frustrating, but definitely a great distraction. "

My advice:

I had never discussed the possibility of cycle. But after reading this article, I questioned, and it is possible that I feel too. But I have not yet been able to link with a menstrual cycle, hormonal or other specific period. But some only during certain period I feel that same attraction to people with disabilities, and other time I saw without really thinking about it. However, during the most hard indeed arrive without warning, and then nothing is enough, or videos, or the thoughts before falling asleep to masturbate the spirit of ideas that we are nice. But as a rule, a handsome guy in the street, in a wheelchair, and I could watch it for hours, giving me ideas, dreams, just for fun to let my mind wander. But reality is not that one, and fortunately. Currently, I find that living his fantasies in our little world, in private, is fine. But I wonder how I would, if I met THE beautiful guy in a wheelchair with the character that suits me ... Could it just nice all day, do I get tired, or would it be constantly excited to see him ideal for me? Anyway, today is my pleasure in sharing my ideas, watching videos, reading the opinions of others, and especially having the chance to talk with people who understand me, without judge me too much.
